

Once upon a time, a 31st of October of 1976, in a very small village, a 14-year-old girl named Jessica Walken went missing.

No one knew what happened, family, friends, citizens, everyone was looking for her with the chance that they would find her, but the months went passing and no one had a clue of Jessica. They began to forget about her without caring about “Jessica’s case”.

The only person that really worried about her was her little brother Jackson, from the day her sister went missing he never stopped praying for her to come back. And that... had consequences. The next year the family received a letter asking for money but because they thought it was a joke they didn’t even react. A few days later, Jessica was still waiting for her family to do something, but then she realised that they were better off without her. That day, she was so furious that her anger helped her escape from the old lady that had her trapped on her garage... she ran away. But ... where did she go? Did she go back home? Or, did she just disappear? And how did she do to contact her brother? The only person that cared about her...

THIS IS NOT THE END...
